BASE-BALL.

CHICAGO-STAR.

The second game of the Chicago Star series of this year was played here yesterday, and resulted like its predecessor in a victory for the home team. It was, however, the most remarkable game of the year for the Chicagoans, in that they won it by good fielding, though outbatted. It will easily be remembered that it has been their habit to lose games before having outbatted, and outbatted the other fellows; but it is a rare and exceptional thing that they won a game by superior fielding. Yet that is the way they captured yesterday's. To briefly run over the Star score shows that, for instance, Dorgan made a two-baser in the second inning, with none out, and yet was left on second. In the third inning three hits were made, but no man reached second. In the fourth two hits were made, with one out, and no score came in. In the fifth, three hits were made, but no score, and seven runs, but neither gave a run. In short, the ninth was the only inning where they did not hit clean and have men on base. The Chicago record was even more remarkable—they won all four games.

The home team went first to bat, and batted out two runs by four safe hits; but the visitors more than offset this by three, while they beat the home team. And so it went on, the two-lasers, and Carpenter followed with a single, making Larkin open his eyes. The first heat was thrown in 2:30; second, 3:15; third, 2:17%.

The players were all in the arms of an alleged had taken refuge in the Indian country, and were sent to furnish the troops. The Indians had requested the request to Washington for protection.

It was the application of the Marshal of Texas to Col. Shaffer to assist him in arresting parties who had taken refuge in the Indian country, and was also declined and rejected.

It was mentioned in which the authority to enforce the neutrality of the Indians, and it was probable that instructions will be issued by military commanders authorizing without previous authority from the War Department, the possibility, if in possession of evidence, to lay claim to the Indians.

REMOVED.

The office of Customs at Tex., has been removed, and San Antonio, Deputy Collector at San Antonio in its place.

ON THE BORDER.

The Mexican Minister says the Mexican Government in its efforts to stop the border was to support United States troops in lawlessness.

PROPOSITION REJECTED.

It was having rejected that the proposal to make the internal revenue-taxes in the interest of the great difficulties experienced in performance of their duty, to whom referred, replies that the proposition was also declined and rejected.

FINANCIAL.

The liquidation of Western indebtedness to the East is a feature of local finance, country banks instead of ordering currency lent to them as freely as a fortnight ago are now doing. Yester evening, the market was quiet for discounts due by customers to meet payments for orders coming in New York and other Eastern places. The shipments of currency to the country and the receipts of produce here have fallen off simultaneously. Lower prices are believed to account for this, and the market has been reduced from 100 to 25c per $1,000 premium. The supply of negotiable paper was fair. Rates of discount were 62c to 10 percent in the banks to regular customers. Better rates can be had by first-class outside borrowers on call or short time.

The clearing house was at 82,700,000.

In the Chicago market Government bonds were weaker, and were freely offered for sale. The dealers present are buying more than they sell, and some of their customers are exchanging Government bonds for securities bearing higher interest. Prices closed about 3c lower for all the list than the opening.

Chicago transactions in New York Stock-Exchange securities were active. The principal dealers were in the Granger securities, and Michigan Central, Wabash, and Lake Shore.

The market was quiet for discounts of the day. Northwestern common, which closed Thursday at 30c, closed yesterday at 42. Milwaukee & St. Paul went from 40c to 45c.

Railroad bonds were strong.

State securities were dull.

Stocks were active and buoyant for the Granger shares. Lake Shore & Michigan Central and Lake Shore. Prices advanced 1c to 2c, the latter Northwestern common. The rest of the market was rather dull, but in the main better.

SPREADS AND STRADDLES.

LEWIS R. DEXTER & CO.

On several occasions during the past two years The Tribune has called upon to expose the scandals of the "spreads and straddles" which have spread broadcast through the country, and pamphlets bearing "bonanza" return to the simple-minded Granger who might be induced to speculate in wheat or other country products. Among the firms which have adopted this method of doing business are the following:

Carl Fretzel, also a candidate for the same office, followed in a characteristic speech, defending himself against the charge that he was not at all honest, and that he was not a good man.

Mr. J. N. Bennett then made a brief speech, with great frankness, revealing the fact that he was a candidate for the Legislature.

Mr. W. E. Mason, candidate for the Legislature, followed in a speech, in which he said:

"I am a man of no education, but I have a desire to serve my country, and I am willing to do my best."

Mr. W. E. Sullivan, in response to a question, said:

"I am a man of no education, but I have a desire to serve my country, and I am willing to do my best."

LITERATURE.

"LE JOURNAL D'UNE FEMME."

Special Correspondence of The Tribune.

PARI, Sept. 10.—Octave Feuillet, the Academician and novelist, the high-souled author of "Le Roman d'un Jeune Homme Pauper," has given just another remarkable work to the world. Before a week is out, it will be added to the table of every one who has an interest in the literature of the country, and of the best kind. There is hardly a man living, hardly Ernest Renan himself, who has such perfect command over the delicate and subtle mysteries of the French language as Octave Feuillet, had his romances and novels no other charm than their purity of style to recommend them, they would be worth reading; but, indeed, the interest of the plot is varied with the singularities of the fictions of the four who have done the most to make the French literature what it is. Octave Feuillet's new work is a study of the life and the morality indicated of a chivalrous lotiness that might, in the opinion of some critics, lay the author open to the charge of excessive refinement and overstrained sentiment. The great lessons he usually endeavors to teach his many readers are these: That life without an ideal is not worth the living; that true love is useless; that we are purified and enabled by voluntary sacrifice. In referring to his writing, one power is always prominent, still clinging to his old belief in humanity, still believing that there are true men and devoted women, and that society is not so utterly rotten and corrupt a thing as the Realists would teach us.

It is a strange and touching story we are told in his last work, "Le Journal d'une Femme" ("A Woman's Diary")—a story of two noble souls who sacrifice their own happiness to assure the safety of others.

The wayward girl, who has been sold into prostitution, has discovered too late that she is not M. d'Euse's love. The shadowy character in which Charlotte attempts to set it right. A woman who has been sold into slavery from folly to folly, and she gradually becomes quite estranged from her husband, during a temporary illness of M. d'Euse, she has nothing but misery before her. When she is started on her way to the arrival of her friend, Paul, vagabond, desperate, she turns neither to the way of vice nor to that of shame. Charlotte consoles her as best she may, but the iron has entered too deeply into poor Paul's soul to be easily removed. When she finds him dead, she is shocked, but she has the strength to find her dead in the snow, under the trees, and to bring him back to life again. She has no other resource, she must marry him, and she does it with a spirit of self-sacrifice that may well be称赞ed.

If any can read the chapter in which the subject is introduced, he will see that there are no obstructions to the plot, and that the reader will, I am sure, be greatly interested.

The end is surprising. Of course, one expects that the old man will be saved, but the devoted lovers, they will marry and live happily ever after. I will not divulge the secret. Suffice it to say that they do not marry. The long drama of two lives is crowned by one last act of self-sacrifice. For the rest, I refer you to the book.

This is the last page:

"But now I left her, my daughter. I write this line, and send it to thy cradle. One day, perhaps, I may put them into thy young wife's marriage-book. They will make you, perhaps, smile, and give you pleasure. But when M. d'Euse comes to me, I shall be sorry for her. She has discovered too late that she is not M. d'Euse's love.
